SIGNS OF TROUBLE

I'm a deaf fan of your magazine and a big fan of John Caldwell's stuff — I usually go straight to his articles. Who knew people drawn with barely imperceptible chins could be so funny? I'm writing to see if Mr. Caldwell was aware that his basketball player attempting to call a time-out (issue #428 page 42) with a thumb looks like he's using the ASL sign for sh?. Just wondering.

Eddie Bart, Arlington, TX

Barts — We contacted John Caldwell, and in between making personal body noises, he informed us that the gesture you refer to may represent the ASL (American Sign Language) sign for sh. However, he emphatically assures us that the player he drew was using ISL (Italian Sign Language), in which that gesture means "Time out — and while you're at it, bring me another plate of gnocchi, Tony!" Grazie and ciao! —Ed.

PUTTING THE PEDAL TO THE MENTAL

This is in regards to your March 2003 issue (MAD #427), specifically the NASCAR portion. Although some of your jokes (and I use this term loosely) were somewhat amusing, I found that others were inconsiderate, insensitive and very ignorant. On page eight, your comment about "downplaying the gruesomeness of fatal crashes" was totally uncalled for. You have no business disrespecting the family members of those who have perished in a racecar. And you have no right to "imply" that NASCAR officials are as uncompassionate as you at MAD are. As for your comments about NASCAR drivers not being athletes, well they are one hundred times the athletes that you are writers. They show skill, endurance, stamina and heart. Whereas you sit in a little office and make fun of something you wish you could never do. These drivers risk their lives every time they step into their cars. They drive under extreme pressure and conditions. You have no business downplaying what they do for a living. I hope you realize that you look like fools now. P.S. NASCAR drivers do not ever jump out of their cars engulfed in "invisible" flame. That would be methane, which NASCAR doesn't use. Yet another mistake you made.

Kacy Oard, Redondo Beach, CA

KO'd — You have opened our eyes. Up till now, we thought NASCAR fans were toothless, slack-jawed, inbred, mulleted, Skool-chewing, moon-shine-distilling, Dukes of Hazzard-watching bumpkins who couldn't read or write. Thanks for proving us wrong — you can more or less read and write! Thanks for writing, y'all! —Ed.

MAD CELEBRITY SNAPS

Keeping a MAD Magazine in my car finally paid off! It's almost as if Jimmy's saying "Blink and you'll miss my show!"

Ryan Hopak, Hollywood, CA

Congrats to Ryan, who snagged a three-year subscription for posing with Jimmy Kimmel. While on the set, Kimmel offered — and later begged — Ryan to co-host his show. Wisely, Ryan declined!

TAKING A MOMENT TO REFLECT

I noticed that the mirror image of Alfred E. Neuman on the cover of MAD Art drawn by Richard Williams is not a mirror image. Alfred's missing tooth is right of center and his part is on the left, identical to a direct portrait. I thought it might be a hidden joke, but Alfred's part in the mirror reflection does not correspond to the part on the back-of-the-head view of him. After reading Mark Evanier's book, I wonder if anyone has ever drawn a mirror image of Alfred.

Gene Phillip, Great Falls, VA

Gene Val Gene — We were happy to receive your letter because it gives us a chance to once again plug MAD Art, published by Watson-Guptill and available wherever books are sold. As for the answer to your query, we have a secret message just for you...hold this page up to a mirror to find out what it is! !XOUMHOZ A 3Y'UOY —Ed.

WHAT, ME CRAZY?

I am writing to inform you of the recent passing of my sanity. The sanity in question was found lying on a deserted stretch of I-95 clutching the Letters Page of MAD, its broken fist to the sky mumbling in Urdu with its last breath of air. I blame not the benevolent editors or contributors of MAD, but the chemical composition of the Letters Page which led to my sanity's demise. Apparently, the issue was found to contain a lethal combination of squirrel blood, arsenic and bad punch lines, the latter which proved to be fatal to sanities in recent clinical tests.

Forest Davis, Kirtland, OH

Davey — Your thoughtful, well-reasoned letter alarmed us, so we sent the Letters Page in question to the lab for chemical analysis. They found no toxic ingredients. Because the lab was running a "2 for 1" special, we decided to send your missive to the lab as well. What we found will shock you! Whereas our ink didn't contain squirrel's blood, the ink in yours contained equal parts of Monkey Juice, Love Bus Brew and your DNA! Run Forest, Run! —Ed.

A MARGINAL REPLY

I have a complaint about those "Drawn Out Dramas" by Sergio Aragones. I waste valuable time — no, make that invaluable time — trying to figure out what's going on. The images in which my eye-staring has prevailed were well drawn and funny, the problem is the pictures are too small and my eyesight is horrible. I understand space is limited, but I also understand you all cherish your faithful readers, so I demand that your fine publication arrange for me to have eye surgery to improve my vision. If this is too much trouble, I will accept a top of the line, comfy-grip magnifying glass. I'm poor, I'm blind and I'm desperate. Please look deep into your pockets and do the right thing.

Derrick Bell, Federal Way, WA

Yo, D! — Your letter touched us deeply, but there is no way we're going to spend a penny on you for eye surgery, magnifying glasses or even a little travel-size bottle of Visine that they sell in pharmacies (aisle five, we think). But we're not heartless. As we pondered your problem, we came up with a novel, dare we say brilliant, win/win solution. Merely subscribe to MAD XL, which features selected "Drawn Out Dramas" in their original large, retina-pampering size. Calling 1-800 4-MADMAG to order will end all your problems (provided you are able to read this response)! —Ed.

DOWN WITH MAD

Those who have seen the new movie Down With Love have no doubt also seen Ewan McGregor's character reading a custom-made 60s-era issue of MAD. The producers hired long-time MAD artist Richard Williams to create a phony MAD cover of Renee Zellweger's character as Alfred. A great showcase for Williams and a sure-fire kiss of death for the film!

SLANG SHOT

I am a 66-year-old fan of MAD. I have a statue of Alfred on my dresser — honest! I have a question that's been nagging me for several years. What was it that Alfred used to say? Was it "It's crackers to slip a rozzer the dropsy in snide"? I would appreciate your clarifying what he said.

Jerry Sloan, Davidson, NC

Sloan Ranger — The phrase you wrote is correct, but was never uttered by Mr. Neuman. As for its meaning, we haven't the slightest idea. So we leave it to you dear readers. What do you think "It's crackers to slip a rozzer the dropsy in snide" means? Send your responses to: Amy "The Big Rozzer" c/o MAD Magazine, 1700 Broadway, New York, NY 10019. We will print the best answers in an upcoming issue! —Ed.

Why is it so easy to burn your house down, but so hard to build a fire in the fireplace? — Crackers...I eat to live to eat — Danger Poet...I like to fly at night while the sun is up — Turacito...If my keyboard has a broken "M" key, how should I spell MAD? — ejn...Why can a pizza get to your house faster than an ambulance? — maryfromprocessing...I've seen Barney in ankle socks — Fah Uhl...Soup on toast is good — FreakofNature...Don't blow your nose with wet hands — biggoofy...Anthropomorphic noodles have the juiciest gossip — Goodbick.

From the gratingly cutesy films of Reese Witherspoon to the unwelcome, very minor comeback of Steven Seagal to Woody Allen's creepy insistence on casting young bombshells as his love interests, there is much that's wrong with the movies and the movie-going experience today. It's a daunting task to narrow it down to a list of only 50 offenses, so don't be surprised if we wind up doing a sequel [which probably won't be nearly as good]. In the meantime, feast your eyes upon...

MAD's 50 WORST THINGS ABOUT... MOVIES

2 James Bond's gradual evolution from a beloved spy series to a two hour, product-placement-packed Sharper Image commercial.

1 Hollywood's embarrassingly tired theory that the whiter, older, and more feeble someone is, the funnier it is to see them acting like a young black rapper.

3 Knowing that Keanu Reeves pulls down something like $20 million per film while your kid brother, who had a non-speaking role as a tree in a first grade production of The Seasons, is a significantly more accomplished thespian and does the job for free.

4 That pain-in-the-ass minimum wage teenage multiplex employee who actually gives a damn if you sneak into another film after the one you paid to see is over.

5 Bigger budgets, enormous advances in special effects and almost 20 years to work on the screen-plays, yet still, the new Star Wars movies just SUCK compared to the first three.

7 Before a movie starts, having to put up with a seemingly endless string of lousy songs you've never heard of, off soundtracks from films you have no interest in seeing, while the screen bombards you with ads for local stores and obscenely overpriced Milk Duds, plus movie trivia a two-year-old could answer, all being assigned the presumptuous title of "pre-show entertainment."

8 Director Martin Scorsese and his two pet caterpillars he calls eyebrows.

10 That one-trick-pony Sandra Bullock has managed to carve out a hugely successful career playing the same slightly nerdy, working-class woman who suddenly becomes irresistibly sexy the moment she pulls off her glasses.

BEFORE

AFTER

6 Writer/director/almost-actor Kevin Smith's "Silent Bob" vanity character and his tired plot-solving device of dispensing words of wisdom during the film's final ten minutes, once Smith finally runs out of genitalia jokes and frantically realizes he needs to tie up all those loose ends.

...which, if you think about it, is just a metaphor for life; and what we've really been after all along is a combination of things. So, to sum up, it's clear that...

9 Big screen versions of lame old sitcoms, the main "draw" of which is to provide us with two-hour versions of shows we couldn't sit through a single 22-minute episode of. Oh yeah, and the "thrill" of seeing how, with a multi-million dollar budget, the set decorator was able to recreate, say, The Brady Bunch's living room.

11 The ever-smug, size-to-match-his-ego blowhard Michael Moore, whose lunatic leftist rantings almost make us nostalgic for the days of Senator Joe McCarthy's Hollywood blacklist.

12 The guaranteed good press any desperate director of a bad film can buy from Harry Knowles of ain't-it-cool-news.com for the price of an advance screening and a large cheese trough from The Swiss Colony.

14 Glowing reviews for horrible films by nobody film critics from unheard-of publications written solely for the novelty of seeing their names in a highly visible nationwide ad campaign.

15 Young movie-goers today don't realize that there was a time, very long ago, when the words "National Lampoon" preceding a movie's title was actually a good sign.

16 Movie theater concessions' growing trend of offering foods that are difficult enough to eat neatly while seated comfortably at a table with proper silverware and adequate lighting, let alone trying to chow down in a cramped space, in the dark, with food on your lap and a plastic spork.

13 Each year's spate of Lorne Michaels-produced films based on skits that Saturday Night Live ran into the ground at least three years prior.

17 There are talented screenwriters crafting countless original, worthy and compelling scripts each year — none of which get produced to instead make room at the multiplex for the next piece of Hollywood crap based on a PlayStation game.

18 Casting directors' misconception that the addition of bloated, insane Marlon Brando to a cast has brought a sense of class to any film since The Godfather.

19

Adam Sandler's cunning scheme of producing movies starring the even-less-funny Rob Schneider, thereby making his own films look like Marx Brothers comedy classics in comparison.

20

The unpleasant, uneasy feeling guys experience as their testicles ascend firmly back into their bodies while being dragged to and forced to sit through yet another chick flick.

21

Those "frequent movie-goer" clubs that generously reward you for thirty paid full-price admissions with a free upgrade from the $3.50 small popcorn to the $4.00 medium size.

24

"Special Edition" DVDs boasting extended scenes that the film's editor had cut out with very good reason, oh-so-hilarious outtakes featuring flavor-of-the-month actors flubbing their lines, and "director's commentary" tracks which are nothing more than the stoned ramblings of some unqualified hack who got his start by showing "great vision" on a Lil' Bow Wow video. Pretty "special," huh?

22

Nit-picky, geeky losers who ruin your favorite flicks by pointing out continuity, technical, or anachronistic problems that you hadn't noticed before but now can't ignore.

23

That master of pretension, M. Night Shyamalan, along with his self-indulgent cameos and "surprise" movie endings that a pre-kindergartner could predict.

25

That guy who took over for Gene Siskel... you know...what's-his-name.

26

The general public's recent accessibility to industry grosses, so even supermarket baggers in Wichita can finally realize the dream of talking like a studio head at the office on Monday morning.

27

Extreme close-ups of actors with bad caps who look like they've got big rows of Chiclets in their mouth.

28

All the press that is given to those completely un-newsworthy, pathetic losers who gleefully sacrifice weeks of their otherwise empty lives camping out in front of theaters, often in full costume, to be among the first to see the latest over-hyped episode of Star Wars that you'll see a few days later when it's convenient.

29

That after being gouged for the high ticket and snack prices, you're guilted into plunking more money into tin cans benefitting a foundation named after Will Rogers, a man whose renowned pithy sayings curiously never covered the subject of being gouged for high ticket and snack prices and then guilted into plunking more money into tin cans.

30

The troubling lack of buddy movies in which two mismatched cops hate each other at the beginning of the film and end up hating each other even more by the end.

32

The mathematical law that proves the number of "wacky" roles Mike Myers plays in a film is inversely proportional to how funny the film is.

31

Sundance's rapid devolution from a prestigious film festival featuring artsy, low-budget, independent films to its current status as a pretentious, over-hyped "showcase" pandering to the big Hollywood studios from which it was originally distancing itself.

34

The studios' insistence on casting Chow Yun-Fat, Jean Reno and other foreign stars who can barely speak English, when we already have enough trouble understanding American actors like Vin Diesel and Michael Rapaport.

33

The now-common studio practice of releasing all of their well-made, classy films in December in hopes of getting Oscar consideration, meaning the other 11 months of the year we're subjected to nothing but their second-rate, unsuccessful "B-quality" dreck.

35

Disney's shameful practice of pillaging its library of animated classics to grind out half-baked, mind-numbing "sequels" with none of the charm or wit of the original.

37

Any completely overused movie references from classic films that bad screenwriters seem to insist on awkwardly forcing into their films for a cheap laugh.

39

Squeezing another seventeen bucks out of a gullible public by producing "Music Inspired by the Motion Picture..." soundtracks that consist of songs that didn't appear in or have anything to do with the film, and were recorded long before it was possible for the songwriters and musicians to have seen even a rough cut of the film that "inspired" them.

Saturday Night Fever
1977

Look Who's Talking
1989

Pulp Fiction
1994

Battlefield Earth
2000

41

A quarter of a century after Saturday Night Fever and 75 pounds later, directors still have John Travolta dance.

36

That odd, unemployable crowd that attends non-holiday weekday afternoon matinees.

38

Multiple-angle-obsessed directors who take five minutes to show a ten-second explosion.

40

Subtitled foreign films so wordy you have to choose between reading what the characters are saying, watching what they're doing, or desperately trying to recall what you learned in that one semester of Finnish you took on a dare.

42

That Mr. Moviefone guy. We just don't like the tone of his voice.

For a list of additional theaters hundreds of miles from your home, press 483 now.

43 Just when you thought that your movie choices had been happily simplified to action, comedy, horror or chick-flick, the dreaded musical rears its ugly head again.

45 The critical praise showered on Christina Ricci when she was eight years old for possessing the enormous talent to recite her Addams Family lines in a dull, emotionless monotone that propelled her into countless other roles where she's polished her "craft" enough to now recite her lines in a dull, emotionless monotone with big boobs.

46 The unsettling fact that those all-but-forgotten one-hit wonders Katrina and the Waves have probably retired as millionaires from their song "Walking on Sunshine" being licensed for every other movie trailer of the last fifteen years.

47 The "pity role" Ron Howard throws to his dentally-challenged brother Clint in each of his films.

44 The unavoidable and disturbing onset of puberty on the Harry Potter cast that all the wizards in Hogwarts can't reverse.

48 After the movie starts, that nauseating feeling you get when the projectionist has forgotten to dim the lights, center the frame or turn on the sound, leaving you with three lousy options: 1) Turn around and glare angrily in the general direction of the booth. 2) Shout at the top of your lungs, "Focus!" 3) Go to the lobby and complain to an usher who's busy dipping his mangy paws directly into the popcorn bin. Any way you slice it, you're missing a good chunk of the movie, and they ain't exactly gonna rewind it for you.

49 Rip-offs of Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon-type moves and slo-mo, 360-degree Matrix-type pans that were once used to enhance genuine martial arts talents are now employed mostly to allow hacks like Drew Barrymore, DMX and that dude who played Stifler in American Pie to look cool and "kick ass."

50 Those inane MAD movie satires, especially the ones that complain about the real film being hard to follow, yet confusingly re-name all the characters (usually involving variations on the word "Smelly") and then proceed to skip over huge chunks of the plot — until you've lost track of what the hell you're reading, give up and skip right to the Fold-In.

Not long ago, we ran a photo personals gallery, giving our lonely, desperate male readers (Is there any other kind with this magazine?) the chance to choose from the most eligible (and equally lonely and desperate) single women on the market. Due to an overwhelming reader response (It was negative, of course, but it was all the encouragement we needed!), we decided it was high time we gave the men their chance to find true love. As ABC followed up The Bachelor with The Bachelorette, we now unashamedly present...

HARVEY Do you like piña coladas? Rum & Coke? Beer? Thunderbird wine? Anything else containing alcohol? So do !! Can you give me some for free? If not, how about lending me $10...for, um, bus fare? BOX 802

BRODY In the photo, last row, 4th from left — sensitive, New Age man, in touch with his feminine side. (For instance, I have ovaries.) Holds doctorate in racquetball from Harvard Divinity School; into S but not M. Seeks woman w/good taste in wallpaper. BOX 636.

DONATELLUS African-American hairdresser. I'm not gay. Being a member of one oppressed minority group is quite enough, thank you very much. Seeking wealthy white woman for love, expenses, guilt trips. BOX 104

FARLEY Are you a 25-40-year-old woman looking for that father figure you never had? I can be that man! All I ask is that you help me wash my Town Car, help me into and out of hot baths and find my dentures on those occasions when I misplace them. Enjoy long, confused walks in the rain. Have meaningful talks together, or just listen as I mutter to myself. BOX 599

ZACH I used to work at Chippen-dales (the furniture company, that is) and at Big Frank's Couch Barn (a local male strip bar). But I'm very sensitive, not a macho jerk. I cry at the sight of fuzzy kittens, sunsets

SNAPPY ANSWERS TO STUPID QUESTIONS

• SPECIAL MEDICAL EDITION •

Is that an enema?

No, it's a new kind of sponge bath — now we're bathing patients from the inside out!

No, we're having a party and this is our new cocktail dispenser. What'll you have?

No, we're just hooking you up directly to the hospital TV! It's only $3.00 a day.

Were there any unpleasant side effects from the medication?

No, I've always wanted a cute little beard I could gently stroke while pondering an answer to brilliant questions like the one you just asked.

No, I've always dreamed of an exciting new career as a circus freak.

No, the chest hair pads out my bra nicely!

2Y DEFECTS M.D.

Did you call for a nurse?

FOR HELP PULL HERE

No, a HEARSE. I've been lying here unattended for so long, I figured I'm dead.

No, I called for a psychiatrist. I must be crazy to stay in a place like this.

I don't know. My long-term memory is not that good.

In case something goes wrong, should we contact a relative?

EMERGENCY ROOM POLICY

NO INSURANCE. OUT!

No, contact my lawyer, who has never lost a multi-million dollar malpractice suit.

No, contact my friend Big Tony "Boom Boom." He owes me one and he'll know what to do.

No, they'll just get in touch with me on Crossing Over!

Does it hurt when I do this?

DR. N. FLIKT PAYNE

Not long ago, in order to be considered a patriot all you had to do was sing along with the national anthem before the start of a ballgame, fly the stars and stripes on Memorial and Veterans Days and wear a flag pin on your lapel. But that's not enough anymore! In the chilling post-9/11 social climate, you've got to watch "fair and balanced" FOX News every day, support the bone-chilling Congressional bill called "The Patriot Act" that gives the government the right to quash our civil liberties, and spout the party line of the radical right wing, who want us to all to believe...

A "True Red, White & Blue" AMERICAN PATRIOT...

ARTIST: PAUL COKER

...insists the American flag symbolizes our precious right to free expression, which is why he's a staunch supporter of any law that would make it a crime to burn one as a form of political protest.

...strongly believes that Hollywood insiders like Sean Penn should "keep their big fat mouths shut" and never get involved in politics, but Arnold Schwarzenegger is an exception, of course.

Love is blind. Sometimes love is also hard of hearing, lactose intolerant and incontinent! When these and other symptoms crop up in relationships where there's a huge age difference, they cause friction. So whether it's for money, the subconscious urge for a grandparental figure or some other deeply twisted psychological need that causes a person to fall head over heels for someone out of their age bracket, in the end it's a lose/lose proposition. These things never succeed. What, you want documentation? You got it! Check out the following and you'll discover...

If you're an average person (and face it, you are), the questions that occur to you while watching reality TV shows are things like: "Who will the Bachelorette pick?" "Which tribe-member is gonna be voted off next?" and, of course, "What else is on right now?!" But there are deeper questions that reality TV raises ("deeper" like that stuff out in the cow-pasture that farmers step in!) Please read on as we ponder the following...

QUESTIONS, PHILOSOPHICAL RAISED BY

If a celebrity decides it's a good idea to accept an invitation to appear on Celebrity Fear Factor or Celebrity Mole — are they really that much of a celebrity anymore?

If a female on a blind dating show really likes the male she's been paired up with, should she get naked with him in a hot tub five minutes after they meet... or wait the full ten minutes, like everybody else?

When having sex with a member of your tribe, do good manners require you to inform them that you plan to vote them off the next day?

Since the success of Meet My Folks showed the viability of ripping off Robert DeNiro movies for reality TV concepts... when can we expect to see Meet My Raging Bull and Who Wants to Marry a Taxi Driver?

DILEMMAS & CONUNDRUMS REALITY TV

Is it just a statistical fluke that the pool of survival-show competitors contains roughly 5,000 times the proportion of bikini models and Laker Girls as the general population?

Should a gentleman contestant on Fear Factor offer his puke-bucket to a lady contestant?

Was Arsenio Hall farther up the show biz ladder being an unemployed has-been...or as the next Ed McMahon on Star Search?

If any kid can go on the internet and find directions for building a hydrogen bomb...why can't the producers of reality TV shows uncover the criminal records and unsavory backgrounds of contestants sometime before they put 'em on the show?

Given her own famously-lurid life experiences, isn't there a more exciting reality TV concept for Monica Lewinsky to emcee than that lame guys-wearing-masks show, Mr. Personality?

IN OUR LAST EPISODE...

Don't mind the maggots, it's...

MONTROSE and... THE BIG APPLE PART TWO

Hello! It's me, The Termite-Eater. I'm back! It's been over a decade since I walked and talked like a robot in Interminable Too! Actually, it's only about a year since I walked and talked like a robot, if you happened to see me in Collateral Damage! A dozen years ago, as a Cybore, I saved a boy named Darn Common from being murdered by mutinous machines! My message to him back then was very simple: "Let's all lay low for 12 years! Then we'll come back and make the exact same movie over again, but we'll also make a brand-new few hundred million dollars! Trust me, it will work! And then, in another 12 years, I'll be back again — for T4!"

Since machines rose up against humans once, Air Force General Brewmeister watches over the security system that watches all of America, so that it will never happen again! His high tech system has over 1,000 LCD monitors! The fact that they're all hooked up to one camera, however, is a bit of a flaw in the system!

My God, look at this! Hostile entities attacking from every side! There's a virus on the loose, and the whole system is going into fatal shutdown! I tell you, I just stink at these high-tech video games! I've been playing for five hours and I haven't won once! Oh well, I guess I should turn the FlyNet Computer System back over to monitoring the Security Grid of the United States for a while!

With all that talk about the future ahead, and the present now and the past gone by, I thought I was in this movie, but now I see that I'm not! Thank God for that! Let me get into my Back To the Future time travel automobile and set the gauges for "A Better Movie Than This"! The possibilities are limitless given this turkey...

INTER RISE OF T

This is Darn Common today! He has no job, no credit, no spare clothes, no home, and he eats his meals out of a can! Quite frankly, I think he took my message about laying low for 12 years a bit too seriously!

When I was 12, The Termite-Eater taught me that my mission in life would be to protect humans from machines in the future! The future back then is the present now, except, of course, for the part that's in the past! So unless I take action now to protect the future that's yet to come, there'll be no new past in the days ahead! Look, who am I kidding?

All you want to see is explosions, car wrecks and humans fighting machines, so let's get this pathetic plot justification over as fast as possible, and get on with the bloody battles!

There are Cybores newer than me! For example, meet T-Sex, Cyber Die's latest creation! She may be a more advanced model than I am, but I have to tell you, none of my parts fit her! Manufacturers always do that when they introduce new models!

I have unbelievable fire power, an astonishing ability to reproduce damaged limbs, and the best looking ass of all the CyberBabes! Even though I'm a packed "10" on the beauty scale, emotionally I'm a zero! Unbelievably lifelike, no? I've been sent here with a list of people to kill! It's a rather long list! It includes everyone on this page, and all of mankind! The one thing I don't see on the list is the reason I should do all this killing! Oh, well, at least I have a job!

General Brewmeister heads up the military's Unbelievable Coincidences Unit! That's why it turns out his daughter, Mate Brewmeister, is in the same movie! And she just happens to know Darn Common! They went to school together! Coincidence? No! Contrivance!

Of course we need a love interest! But with the short amount of time this movie has to spend on romance, don't plan on seeing Mate's fiancé more than this one time!

As a sympathetic veterinarian, I'd like to be able to euthenize this sick dog of a movie, but if the critics couldn't kill it, what chance would I have! Back in high school, Darn Common was voted "Most likely to save mankind from the tyranny of 'out of control' machines" in the school yearbook! I personally voted him "Most likely to become a useless bum"! Turns out the yearbook and I were both right! He's the useless bum most likely to save mankind from the tyranny of out of control machines! Of course we both should have been voted most likely to be involved in the world's oldest movie cliché! I mean, I haven't seen him in years, and yet of all the vet joints in all the world, isn't it unbelievable that he came into mine?

As a successful vet and businesswoman, Mate is very independent, and I think that spells trouble for our upcoming marriage! How do I know that? Well, today Mate and I picked out our dinnerware, silverware and glassware patterns! The problem is, she only ordered service for one! And she said she wanted a very small wedding! I have no problem with that, but don't you think I should have been invited?

WRITER: DICK DEBARTOLO

MINABLE THE BAD SCENES

Someone doesn't want to wait her turn! This pushy broad must have killed my next appointment so she could move to the front of the line! I'm gonna have to start giving out numbers or I'll have no customers left!

Yagh! This human needs more salt in his diet! My internal computer says this blood isn't Mate Brewmeister's, but that other blood is from one of my Primary Targets — Darn Common! According to his blood analysis, he must be downing pills from Mate's drug cabinet, or else he's part man, part dachshund, part racehorse!

I saw you spying on me! You can't escape!

Gaggg...gaggg... When I was little, my mother said high heels could hurt something awful! She wasn't kidding... cough...cough!

I must kill Darn Common! Where is he? In the other room — locked in a cage!

In a cage? How inhumane! I'll set him free! Then I will kill him like the dog he is!

I slammed T-Sex into that propane tank, and it exploded! She looks good with flaming red hair! Now I must find Darn Common!

For a drifter with no home, no money and no prospects, Darn Common sure is popular!

I must find Darn Common! I must not kill him! Not kill him! With what's going on around here, that's a refreshing change! You're the most gentle, sensitive freak I've run into lately!

You — alive? I saw you die! I'm not the same Termite-Eater! I look the same, act the same, and talk the same, but my hair's parted a bit differently! For me, that's a big change!

If you're gonna kill me, get it over with! I'm sick of running! Although with the horse pills I just took, I could run a furlong in 45 seconds!

You must live! This is a long film that's short on plot, so I need all the help I can get!

If that stupid Termite-eater thought an explosion and fire would stop me, he's got another thing coming — namely, the full impact from this cannon!

I like it when women bare arms, but I hate it when they bear arms!

So we meet face to face to have hand to hand combat!

Looks more like axe to head combat to me!

I'm doing my best, but it's impossible to penetrate that alloy skull!

It's not only my axe-resistant, non-porous metallic skull, but I put on six heavy layers of lacquer hair spray! For once, I'm having a good hair day!

Are you back? You shouldn't even exist! We blew up the plant that produces Cybores like you over ten years ago!

Yes, but you didn't touch the gift shop in the lobby! That's where I was at the time, dusting off the covers of all my unsold videos!

I thought we stopped judgment day when we blew up the plant!

You stopped judgment day, but you didn't stop the Termite-eater sequels! Nothing can do that!

What are you doing? Ripping open my chest to fix an internal injury!

I've heard of crappy medical plans, but yours must be the worst!

I am powered by two megatronic hydrogen fuel cells! When one fails, I switch to the other! Problem is, the idiot who designed this system put the relay switch on the inside!

Is T-Sex powered the same?

No! T-Sex is an experimental prototype! She's made of triple thick non-stick mumble jumble alloy! It's impossible to get under her skin!

Surely there's got to be a way to melt her!

Impossible! I tried acids, lasers, flowers, chocolates, even a candle-light dinner! Nothing works!

Why are we here? My mother is buried here!

And you broke open her coffin! That's inhumane, even for a non-human!

Look inside! It's not your mother! It's full of weapons of mass destruction!

Wow! You just found what Hans Blix and all the U.N. Inspectors couldn't! If they had, George W. Bush would have been re-elected President!

I shot you point blank in the mouth, and you merely spit out the bullet!

What's the big deal? I don't like the taste of lead bullets unless they're salted!

You might as well know the truth, Mate! He's a Cybore! A robot! A mechanical man!

Well that explains his stiff acting... How do you explain yours?

Sorry, Mr. Detective! You thought you had picked up Snott, Mate's fiancé! But I'm really T-Sex, a Cybore who can morph into anyone!

Why are you destroying me?

You're a crappy driver! All you did was drive on the roads! In this movie, we only drive on sidewalks, through buildings and through cemeteries! Watch!

You are good! And you get 22 head-stones a gallon!

I'm so stressed! Car wrecks, gun shots, Cybores, explosions, breaking open coffins!

Don't worry! I'll help you! I'm Doctor Silvertongue!

I need help, doctor! Even before I learned that thing was a Cybore, there was something about it that frightened me!

Then I can't help you! I'm a post-trauma counselor! If you felt frightened before the Cybore did anything, you need a pre-trauma counselor! This is the age of total medical specialization! Good luck!

We must change vehicles!

So we'll move on undetected?

No, so we can wreck at least one of everything! Fire trucks, unmarked cars, cycles, hearses and now an RV! Hop in! We must find the HQ for FlyNet, the Global Communications Network!

This is your lucky day! My father, General Brewmeister, runs the FlyNet project! If that's not too much of a coincidence, this will be: The secret HQ for the FlyNet project is located in the very next panel!

Count-down to Doomsday: three hours!

Count-down to the end of this movie: endless!

FlyNet is assuming control of all computers! That means the Cybores are preparing for an attack on humans!

If this is a war between people and machines, why are you on our side?

For my reason to make sense, you have to understand displacement fields, time-shifting parallelograms, the Tooth Fairy and the Easter Bunny!

Ok, I'll just trust you, because we all know there's no such thing as displacement fields and time-shifting parallelograms! And I have my doubts about the Easter Bunny, too!

Has the computer virus breached any firewalls yet?

No firewalls have been breached!

Well, that's good news!

Yes it is, sir! But there's also bad news — we never installed any firewalls! The FlyNet System cost 40 trillion dollars! It would have cost $30.00 more for a firewall to protect the country against take-over from diabolical forces! Thirty bucks is thirty bucks! We don't want to squander taxpayers' money!

Mate, my darling daughter. I know you get annoyed when I don't call or write, but isn't shooting me a little drastic?!

That wasn't me, dad! That was T-Sex! She morphed into someone that looked like me! Those Cybores can make themselves look like anybody they want!

Nothing against your looks, sweetheart, but if she could look like anybody she wanted, how come she didn't morph into Halle Berry?

General, tell us where the FlyNet system core is located!

I don't know what you're talking about! Besides, the system I know nothing about is infected with a virus!

FlyNet is the virus! It's the reason everything is falling apart!

FlyNet is part of AOL Time Warner? Yipes! We are in deep doo-doo! Well, you are — lucky for me, I'll be dead and outta here any minute!

Can you do anything to help my dying father, Termite-Eater?

No! To a Cybore, death and pain mean nothing! I have no emotions! But I do have a piece of this film and if the grosses fall below 200 mil, you will see a grown machine cry!

Cough! I'm dying fast! The FlyNet system core is underground! In the Sierras! Enter near the big tree! Okay, I'm history!

Can we get to the Sierras by subway or submarine? We haven't wrecked either one of those yet!

What are those things?

They're called Hunter-Killer-Dillers! They can shoot down just about anything with their powerful lasers!

So they were developed as another weapon of mass destruction?

Not really! They were developed as another licensed product for the teen market!

Hijacking a cargo plane to fly to the mountains was a great idea! We haven't wrecked one of these before!

T-Sex is under the plane, trying to get in!

I wish her luck! These days everybody has to go through security before they board a plane, and with all the metal she's carrying, they'll never let her on!

Judging from those sounds coming from under the plane, I'd say T-Sex morphed her arm into a giant can-opener!

CHICKA CHUNK

KRINCH!

SKRAT!

It was lucky that we were able to bail out of the airplane before T-Sex wrecked it!

And even luckier that we landed inside the secret security tunnel, and that my elbow accidentally touched and unlocked this two-foot-thick Safety Blast Door!

But you're not so lucky, because T-Sex infected me, and now I'm going to kill you, Darn Common!

But the reader is lucky, because these few sentences cover about 30 minutes of this interminable movie!

Prepare to die, Darn Common!

You won't kill me! You're not a killer! Not anymore! You don't want to do this!

You know my destiny! I have to live! Think of a peaceful world! Think of world unity! Think of Terminator 4!

Bingo! T4 — That's the money word! You're home free!

MAJOR NEW
GLOBAL WARMING?

HERE WE GO WITH ANOTHER RIDICULOUS MAD FOLD-IN

We've known for a long time that factory emissions, gas-guzzling SUVs and fluorocarbons have all been linked to the excessive heating of our planet. But recent developments have pointed to a new culprit in this continuing problem. To find out what the new cause is, fold page in as shown.
